Allies Face New Trouble In Italy

TRIESTE RETURN IS DEMANDED BY ITALIANS

20,000 Parade Clamoring For City; Fighting Breaks Out

MARSHAL TITO PROTESTS Yugoslav Leader Challenges Allied Occupation Of Important Port

ROME, May 4—Twenty thousand Italians paraded through the Piazza Venezia today demanding the return of Trieste to Italy after Yugoslav Marshal Tito challenged Allied occupation of the port.

Fighting broke out between students and Communists in front of the tomb of the unknown soldier. The Communists, who are considered here to favor Yugoslav control of Trieste, were coming down the steps of the tomb when they were set on by students.

Numerous minor injuries were suffered in the fight, waged with sticks and stones, virtually a repetition of similar clashes yesterday.

The huge crowd of students, workers and war veterans who demonstrated in the Piazza Venezia appealed against a monarchy in Italy and asked for a national assembly.

But Trieste was the main theme, its seriousness underlined by Tito's strongly-worded challenge to the Allied high command.

A statement from Yugoslav army headquarters said that New Zealand troops had occupied Trieste after its liberation by Yugoslav forces "without our permission."

The occupation "might have undesirable consequences unless the matter is settled promptly by mutual agreement," the statement said.

The Trieste matter—a quarrel between Italy and Yugoslavia dating back to the last war—threatened to involve the Allied armies in a repetition of the "Greek tragedy," one front dispatch said, referring to the fighting between the British and Greek rebel forces in Athens last winter.

The dispatch, from an Exchange Telegraph correspondent, added that General Bernard Freyberg, commander of the New Zealand division "is treading a cautious path."

The correspondent said the situation was further complicated by fighting between Tito's partisan and Draza Mihailovich's Chetniks in Trieste and the nearby hills.

The Exchange Telegraph dispatch said there had been fierce fighting between the German garrison and Tito's troops before the

Nazis May Make Stand In Norway

Mountainous Country Could Be Used For Final Battles Of War

WASHINGTON, May 4—Mountainous, easily defended Norway seemed certain today to be the fortress in which the Nazis, if they chose to fight on, will make their last desperate stand.

The Germans have had four years to fortify the tortuous Norwegian coast. More than 200,000 troops, many of them ardent young Nazis, have a firm grip on the country's 3,000,000 peoples and its resources. What remains of the German navy, including many of Fuehrer Karl Doenitz's pet u-boats, are sheltered in Norwegian ports.

Allied observers have already spotted German forces fleeing from Denmark and northern Germany in a feverish "reverse Dunkirk." They could go only to Sweden, to be interned, or to Norway.

While it was doubtful that large forces of Germans could cross the Skagerrak channel between Norway and Denmark without running into trouble, it was conceded here that Doenitz and his aides could fly to the Norwegian redoubt with ease.

There, it was agreed by Norwegian and American experts, Doenitz would be in a position to carry out his threat to fight to the bitter end.

Transfer of German headquarters in Norway from Oslo, the capital to central Norway was taken as an indication that the Nazis had long planned to use Norway as the "last redoubt."

When the end will come if a Norwegian cleanup becomes necessary was a wide open question among military experts and those familiar with the difficult coast and terrain of the long-occupied Scandinavian country.

It is admittedly the toughest coast for an invasion in all Europe, the only break being a slight strip of relatively smooth shoreline in southern Norway. An amphibious invasion, it was explained, would require the taking of thousands of small, probably fortified islands strung along Norway's coast at the mouths of fjords and inlets.

The precipitous firds themselves have been heavily mounted with Nazi cannon, according to Norwegian underground reports.

A paratroop invasion, it was felt, would be almost as difficult because of Norway's mountainous terrain. The invading troops would have to parachute earthward in small groups which, upon hitting earth, would encounter great difficulty.

GOP MAY OPPOSE NOMINATION OF R. E. HANNEGAN

WASHINGTON, May 4—President Truman's nomination of Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan as postmaster general was threatened with Republican opposition in the senate today.

The opposition, if it comes out into the open, is expected to be led by Sen. Forrest C. Donnell of Missouri.

Donnell refused to discuss his plans in advance of a Republican steering committee meeting today before which he and other GOP senate freshmen were invited to appear.

It was reported, however, that he was behind a Republican move which blocked Hannegan's confirmation by the senate yesterday. These reports said that Donnell is considering a motion to send the nomination back to the senate postoffice committee for public hearings to air a Missouri political fight in his election as governor in 1940.

McKellar sought to get Hannegan's appointment, which is to become effective July 1, confirmed immediately under suspension of rules. He was blocked by an objection by Senate Republican Leader Wallace H. White, Jr., of Maine, reportedly acting on behalf of Donnell.

Old, New Postmaster General

Allied Troops Score Gains In Tarakan, Okinawa And Mindanao Campaigns

By United Press
Allied troops scored new gains today in the Tarakan, Okinawa and Mindanao campaigns and American Superfortresses blasted again at the Japanese homeland.

Australian forces on the oil-rich island of Tarakan off the east coast of Borneo battled through the outskirts of Tarakan city against stiffening resistance and pushed to the edge of the airfield three miles to the northwest.

The drive was hampered by an elaborate system of mines and booby traps described as equal to any yet encountered in the Pacific war.

Tokyo reported that 10 Allied destroyers and three cruisers were shelling Japanese positions from Tarakan bay.

At the Tarakan airport Japanese were entrenched in caves and tunnels which the Australians were attacking with flame-throwers and tanks.

On southern Okinawa, Marines cracked through strong defenses on the west coast to drive within a mile of Naha, the capital.

The breakthrough was the first major gain made by the Americans since a Marine division and a Fourth army division was sent into the battle several days ago. The drive elsewhere along the five mile front virtually was stalled by heavy Japanese fire.

In support of the Okinawa campaign, a sizeable force of B-29's attacked the Japanese home islands of Kyushu and Shikoku. The Kyushu attack was the 12th in 18 days and continued the attempts to knock out the bases from which Japanese suicide planes have been attacking American forces around Okinawa.

The suicide planes sank two light fleet units and damaged

GOVERNMENT IN CHARGE OF HARD COAL OPERATIONS

HAZELTON, Pa., May 4—The American flag was raised over the Pennsylvania's anthracite mines today as the government took over operations of the strike-bound industry.

President Truman, confronted with his first big labor problem since he became President April 12, ordered the mine seizures last night.

Acting on the presidential order, Solid Fuels Administrator Harold Ickes took over control of the properties and ordered the miners to return to work Monday. It was the second time in two years that Ickes seized all of the hard coal properties because of a labor dispute.

The back-to-work movement was expected to get under way Monday with full production expected by Tuesday or Wednesday.

SOVIETS STILL SEARCHING FOR HITLER'S BODY

New Reports About How Nazi Leader Met His Death Being Circulated

450,000 ARE CAPTURED
Russians Reveal Most Of Berlin Leveled By Red Shells, Aerial Bombs

By United Press
Radio Moscow said today that inhabitants of Berlin believe Adolf Hitler shot himself and Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels swallowed poison.

The report came as Red army troops probed the ruins of central Berlin for the third straight day in search of the bodies of Hitler, Goebbels and others of the Nazi hierarchy.

Some Nazi bigwigs also may be found among German prisoners taken in Berlin, at last count more than 134,000. One neutral report last week said Hitler and other Nazis were fighting as army privates in an attempt to escape detection when capitulation came.

Not until Hitler's body has been found can the Allies be certain he is dead. The suicide version first was advanced for both Hitler and Goebbels by Hans Fritzsche, Goebbels' deputy propaganda chief, who was captured by the Russians.

Tokyo radio sought to bolster the illusion that Hitler died a hero by quoting a Dornier dispatch which it said had been sent from Hamburg just before that city fell to the British.

The broadcast said Hitler was descending a flight of stairs in his official residence when a Soviet shell exploded "right in front of him and took his life." Dornier attributed the report to a "trusted bodyguard" of Hitler.

A Soviet announcement that the number of prisoners captured in Berlin had risen to 134,000 boosted total German casualties in the 12-day battle for and in the city to roughly 450,000.

Radio Moscow said some buildings still were standing in the outskirts of Berlin, but the center of the city, including Hitler's reich chancellery, had been flattened.

HAROLD STASSEN GAINS PRESTIGE AT CONFERENCE

SAN FRANCISCO, May 4—This United Nations conference is making American political history today with the emergence of Lt. Cmdr. Harold E. Stassen as the powerhouse of the American delegation.

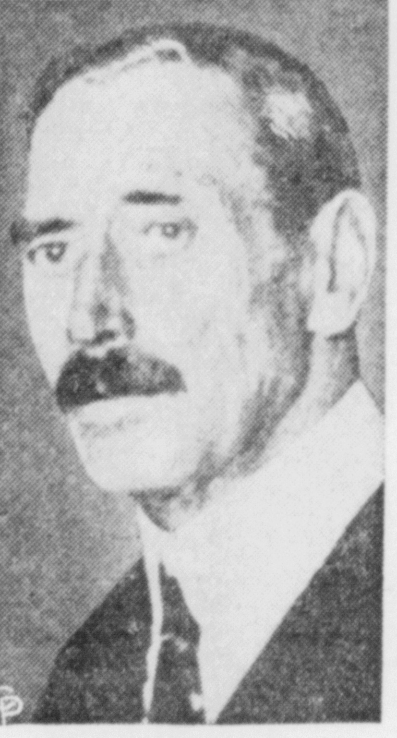

He is junior member in everything except political significance. Stassen plays his role here before a picked audience of American newsmen and top flight politicians from all over the world. He is judged by observers to be moving fast toward last position in the 1948 race for Republican presidential nomination.

Stassen is 35 years old. He was first elected governor of Minnesota when only 31. Campaigning for re-election after the war began, Stassen told the voters that he would resign shortly to join the Navy and he did so, leaving his political organization in the capable hands of Edward J. Thye who moved up from the lieutenant governorship.

For the record, Stassen made a campaign for the 1944 Republican presidential nomination, something like the frontporch strategy invented by William B. McKinley. The difference, however, was that Stassen's front porch was the bridge of Admiral William F. Halsey's flagship in the Navy's Task Force 58.

With his status as a war veteran firmly established in the Navy's tremendous sweep through the Pacific, Stassen's backers figure him as better than merely a 1948 challenge to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

NO DRAFT CALL CUTS PLANNED

Gen. Marshall Says Army Has Been Unable To Meet Replacement Demands

WASHINGTON, May 4—Prospects of a reduction in draft calls during the next few months got a sharp setback today from Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall.

In a letter to Chairman Andrew J. May, D. Ky., of the house military affairs committee Marshall pointed out that the Army has not been able to meet replacement demands of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Douglas MacArthur for May and June, and that Eisenhower's current losses are running 2,000 men daily.

At the same time it was learned from an authoritative selective service source that there is no intention of reducing the size of draft calls at least through June 30. Current calls are approximately 120,000 men a month.

Marshall's letter to May, dated May 2, primarily concerned the intent of congress in its recent amendment to the selective service act prohibiting the Army from sending 18-year-old inductees into combat without six months' training.

"We have not been able to meet demands of Gen. MacArthur and Gen. Eisenhower for replacements during May and June," Marshall said. "This amendment will further add to the shortage by some 50,000 over the next three months."

He pointed out that despite recent sweeping successes in the

FRENCH LOOMS IDLE WHILE U. S. SENDS CLOTHES

WASHINGTON, May 4—The house committee investigating government agencies disclosed today that the United States is making and shipping military uniforms to France while looms in that country are standing idle.

Rep. Fred A. Hartley, Jr., R. N. J., said the worst part of it is that the American domestic supply is not only short, but if someone here wants a quality coat or suit he must buy an imported British garment or go without.

The result, he said, is that American manufacturers must spend all their time making inferior garments and uniforms and are losing the high grade domestic market to the British.

Hartley said the committee would call in Army, foreign economic administration and United relief and rehabilitation administration representatives to find out what can be done.

He put part of the blame on military leaders for not forcing the French to open idle looms.

MONTGOMERY SAID NEGOTIATING WITH ADMIRAL DOENITZ

Seventh Army Races Through Brenner Pass To Capture Salzburg; German Divisions Are Surrendering En Masse

By United Press
Nazi spokesmen announced the end of German resistance in Holland today and negotiations for a general German surrender were reported under way in Denmark.

British troops already were swarming into Denmark, where Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery and the new Nazi fuehrer Admiral Karl Doenitz were reported negotiating a general surrender. American Seventh army troops were moving across the Brenner pass into Italy from the north.

The German-controlled Oslo radio said the "cease firing" order had been sounded in western Holland, halting all fighting in the Rotterdam, Amsterdam and the Hague triangle still held by the Nazis.

Oslo said an "armistice" had been signed by the Allied and German commanders in Holland, indicating that the enemy had surrendered unconditionally.

Capitulation in Holland would leave the Germans only three major pockets of resistance on the European continent—Denmark, Norway and Czechoslovakia.

British Second army troops already were racing 15 miles or more into Denmark's Jutland peninsula and American Third army troops in the south were closing fast on the Austrian citadel of Linz, threatening momentarily to link up with the Russians and envelop all Czechoslovakia.

At the same time, the U. S. Seventh army rumbled down through the Brenner pass into Italy and captured Salzburg, headquarters of the southern national redoubt 11 miles north of Berchtesgaden. Salzburg capitulated to the Americans without a fight and a CBS broadcast relayed from the front said the Yanks pushed on to within five miles—easy artillery range—of Berchtesgaden.

German divisions were surrendering en masse up and down the European front.

Norwegian Nazi leaders, including Josef Terboven, Reichskommissar and Admiral Fritz Boehm, German commander in Norway, were said to be participating in the Denmark surrender conference.

There were reports also of German soldiers and sailors mutinying in Denmark.

The enemy's Wilhelmshaven radio announced soberly "this is the last hour of the war."

Oslo radio reported from Copenhagen that the British Second army crossed the Danish border at midnight unopposed by the German garrison of more than 750,000—a hint that its surrender may be imminent.

Kiel Open City
Field dispatches said all fighting had ceased on the Kiel peninsula, linking northern Germany and Denmark. The Germans declared the naval bases of Kiel and Flensburg open cities, to be occupied at will by the British.

Reports persisted that surrender negotiations already were under way in Denmark or Kiel between Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery and German Fuehrer Admiral Karl Doenitz. A Stockholm newspaper said the surrender of the last remnants of the German army was expected at any hour.

Swedish reports that commanders of German forces in both Denmark and Norway were attending the negotiations suggested that the surrender would cover the 250,000 or more troops in those countries as well as the scattered pockets still holding out in northwest

WAR IN BRIEF

Western front — Allied armies collapse Germany's two national redoubts by racing into Denmark and slashing through Brenner pass into Italy; Salzburg surrenders to 7th army; Doenitz reported negotiating surrender.

Eastern front — Fourth Ukrainian army liberates last of pre-war Poland.

Pacific war — Allied troops score new gains on Okinawa, Tarakan and Mindanao; B-29's blast Japanese homeland again.

China — Reinforced Chinese troops counter-attack Japanese drive toward air base at Chinkiang.

Germany, the Netherlands, Czechoslovakia and Austria.
Surrender By Thousands
Front dispatches said German troops in the north were surrendering to British and American forces by the tens and even hundreds of thousands. Nearly as large groups were captured in the south, where Field Marshal Ewald Von Kleist, commander of German army group A, surrendered to the Third army.

The Third army also all but completed the encirclement of the Czechoslovak redoubt with an almost unopposed drive to within five miles of the Danubian fortress of Linz, third largest city in Austria. Russian forces were just east of Linz.

United Press War Correspondent Robert Richards reported from the front that the capture of Linz appeared imminent with the Germans unable to muster enough strength to halt onrushing American tanks.

Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's American Seventh army sealed the doom of the southern redoubt with a two-pronged drive, into Salzburg and Italy.

Salzburg Surrenders
Salzburg, largest city in the redoubt, surrendered unconditionally at 9:25 a. m. today to Maj. James (Buzz) McCarthy, commander of the 121st cavalry squadron of the 106th cavalry group.

The ease with which the Americans took Salzburg indicated that Berchtesgaden, site of Adolf Hitler's Alpine fortress, also would topple without a major struggle. Berchtesgaden already was within artillery range of American vanguards.

Elements of Seventh army's 411th regiment by-passed the holdtened by aerial bombs and Soviet shells.

Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering's air ministry, where he boasted enemy bombs never would fall on Germany, was leveled by bombs, the broadcast said. Gestapo headquarters burned down.

The broadcast said German civilians had begun to emerge from cellars and were lining up at food depots for bread.

Radio Moscow also for the first time told the story of Berlin's surrender. An armored troop carrier pulled up to a Soviet command post and a German soldier bearing a white flag stepped out, the broadcast said.

Then General Westing, commander of the Berlin garrison, stepped from the car, followed by members of his staff. Westing offered unconditional surrender. A few moments later, Moscow said, another car drove up and several men with their coats collars up stepped out, among them Fritzsche.

Radio Berlin was heard yesterday broadcasting in Russian for the first time.

COUNTY SCHOOLS PLAN SOFTBALL TOURNAMENT HERE

Eight county schools will participate in a county school softball tournament at Ted Lewis park it was announced Friday.

All but two of the county superintendents announced at the superintendents' meeting Thursday afternoon that their school teams would participate in the tournament, date of which will be announced later. Salt Creek and Deer Creek had not made a definite decision at the time of the meeting.

The games will be scheduled at 7 p. m. during the tournament. It was planned that there be one twilight and one night game each evening of the tournament.

Two trophies are planned to be given to the winning contestants. The first trophy will go to the winner of the tournament. The second trophy will be presented to the runner-up in the tournament.

It was decided at the superintendents' meeting that the schools in the county would not close in celebration of V-E Day. Assembly or room programs will be held celebrating the occasion with prayer and thanksgiving.

Superintendents were given the necessary supplies for graduation ceremonies for the county's approximately 157 seniors. Eighth grade promotion certificates were also distributed to the superintendents.

OPA LISTS NEW RULES ON PASSENGER CAR ADS

WASHINGTON, May 4—As part of its campaign to enforce price control on used passenger cars, the Office of Price Administration today directed that newspaper advertisements offering automobiles for sale must include the make of the car, the model year, the body type, the price and a statement that the price is "within OPA ceiling."

At the same time, OPA removed from price control all used passenger cars of the model year 1925 and earlier.

GOODMANS HEAR SONS FREED, ON WAY HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Harley D. Goodman of Kingston have just received a letter from their two sons, Burnett and Russell, recently liberated prisoners of war of the German government.

The letter, written April 22 in France follows: "Dear Mom: Just a line from Russell and me, we are both together again, well and safe. You can imagine how happy and glad we are to be back with the U. S. Army. We are on our way home, Mother, so don't worry. Give our love to all, so we will be seeing you soon. I will write more later. With love, your sons, Burnett and Russell."

The Goodman boys entered service October 22, 1941, going overseas February 18, 1942. They were captured February 17, 1943, in North Africa and were imprisoned in Stalag 2-B, being released by the advance of the Allied Armies.

MYSTERY BLAST IS HEARD OVER SIX STATE AREA

PHILADELPHIA, May 4—A mystery flash of light, accompanied by an earth and building shaking explosion that roused thousands of seaboard residents, flared across the eastern sky today over a six-state area.

The sky lighted brilliantly for one to three seconds, and buildings in the Philadelphia, southern New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland areas were shaken.

The unexplained flash was visible from Brooklyn, N. Y., to Richmond, Va., and westward off the coast upward to 200 miles.

Police, plane pilots, weather observers, military and naval installations, and just plain John Citizen were witnesses to the dazzling display in the heavens at 3:35 a. m.

Newspapers and the police were deluged with telephone calls from excited persons who wanted to know whether war plants were sabotaged, or whether an earthquake was in progress.

At the Fels planetarium of the Franklin Institute, Director Roy K. Marshall said the mystery flash in all probability was a bolide, or detonating meteor.

NAZI COLLAPSE WILL NOT STOP JAPS—SUZUKI

By United Press

The collapse of her Axis partners will not affect Japan's determination to fight on to victory and world rule, Prime Minister Admiral Baron Kantaro Suzuki has informed the Japanese people.

In a speech to the Japanese nation, broadcast by the Tokyo radio and heard by the United Press in San Francisco, Suzuki expressed sympathy for Germany's loss of Hitler.

He admitted the "unexpected development" in Europe would add to difficulties of Japan's position in the Far East and would increase Japan's "weight of responsibility to win the war for the Axis alone."

"We are fully prepared," he declared, "to avenge the fallen heroes, Hitler and Mussolini."

Meanwhile, Suzuki's cabinet was drawing criticism of the Japanese press for "lack of vigor" and failure to recognize the spirit of the people," the Japanese Domei agency said in a dispatch recorded by the FCC.

European theater Eisenhower "has vigorously protested proposed reductions (to that theater) in order to get increased shipments off to Gen. MacArthur."

Marshall added that Norway, Denmark and parts of Holland are still to be liberated, and said: "Within the week Gen. Eisenhower has informed me that his losses are currently averaging 2,000 men daily and he anticipates no reduction in his replacement requirements for June."

For the Pacific theater, Marshall said there is an urgent need for new men to replace weary veterans who have been in combat for long periods.

Meanwhile the house military affairs committee called high war department officials into a closed meeting for a report on its demobilization plans.

May said this was the first of a series of closed meetings that would deal with the "general picture" of military plans after the war and would concern redeployment of troops after V-E day, the Army's discharge program, size of the postwar Army and peacetime military training.

Chairman Carl Vinson, D. Ga., of the house naval affairs committee said he would call on the Navy for a similar report next week.

Vinson made his announcement after he was informed that the Navy had tentatively agreed on plans for the size of its postwar fleet.

LUTHERAN MEN WILL SPONSOR BIBLE SCHOOL

Trinity Lutheran Brotherhood voted to again sponsor the church Bible school, action being taken Thursday at the regular meeting in the parish house.

The Daily Vacation Bible school sessions will be held in the parish house and will begin shortly after the close of the Circleville schools.

Carl Leist, president, was in the chair for the business hour and called on the Rev. George L. Troutman for a special prayer for the speedy conclusion of the war.

Lunch, under supervision of Charles Mack, consisted of ice cream, cake and coffee.

Several groups of songs by the three daughters of Harry Barthelma and a piano solo by Nancy Eitel opened the program.

Gladden Troutman gave an interesting account of the Curtiss-Wright plant and his activities there as an employee.

Herbert Hammel showed several reels of films depicting the beginning and development of naval aviation.

Mr. Hammel secured these pictures through the courtesy of Curtiss-Wright and the naval officials there.

The June meeting will begin the outdoor sessions of the Brotherhood and will be at the Pickaway County Home with James Mowery as host. Pickaway county Boy Scouts will present the program.

COLUMBUS YOUTH FACES LIFE SENTENCE IN PEN

COLUMBUS, May 4—Harry Byers, Jr., 17, today faced a life sentence in Ohio penitentiary for the Jan. 8 slaying of his father after his first degree murder trial came to a sudden end when the prosecution agreed to accept a second degree plea.

Byers will be eligible for parole at the end of about 10 years. He would have had no hope of parole if he had been sentenced to life imprisonment under the first degree charge.

The defense offered to plead guilty to the reduced charge shortly after Prosecutor Ralph J. Bartlett told the jury that Byers and other inmates had planned to slay a guard and escape. He offered an iron bar found in the youth's cell as proof of the plot.

POLISH PREMIER DEMANDS PLACE AT CONFERENCE

By United Press

The premier of the Soviet-sponsored Lublin Polish government today demanded representation at San Francisco "in the interest of enduring peace."

Premier Edward B. Subka-Morawski in a speech broadcast by Lublin radio said, "Poland is too important a material and moral factor to be passed by in this conference that is to decide about the future of peace."

"Poland has borne, next to the Soviet Union, the greatest sacrifices," he said in the speech.

day in committees which will study various sections of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals and consider amendments. The committees will be the working bodies of the conference.

Tonight is the deadline on submission of amendments to the proposals drafted at Dumbarton Oaks. Scores of amendments will be in the hands of the secretary-general by midnight and distributed to the appropriate committees for study.

The Big Four held another meeting last night in the penthouse apartment of Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., to study their respective amendments and seek, wherever possible, sufficient agreement to sponsor them jointly. No announcement was made of their two hour session except for a report by four U. S. senators who attended the meeting. They told the foreign ministers that the purpose of their trip here was to demand that America have full postwar control of all strategic Japanese islands such as Iwo Jima.

The question of military bases is intertwined with the proposal for territorial trusteeships which will be written into the world organization charter. A special trusteeship subcommittee of the five permanent members of the proposed security council met last night to exchange views on the American plan which was submitted to the others Monday night.

The British presented their ideas on a trusteeship plan. It was understood to favor one type of control over all dependent peoples areas whereas the United States provides for a dual type of control which would give the trustee power absolute control in such strategic areas as the Carolines and Marshalls.

Despite the interest in amendments, this conference is still Polish-conscious. The absence of Poland hangs over the delegates like a cloud. And although the prospects of a Polish delegation getting here before the conference ends is virtually nil, delegates would feel better if some progress toward a solution of the controversy could be revealed before Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov leaves for Moscow — probably sometime next week.

Meanwhile, lines were being drawn for an expected battle between the big powers on one hand and the so-called middle and small powers on the other over amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks proposals.

The middle and small nations are almost unanimous in some of their demands for changes, but as of today they appear to lack a leader.

Australian foreign minister H. V. Evatt made a bid for that role yesterday by outlining his country's proposed amendments and arguing for special recognition of what he called "security powers"—those capable and willing to contribute to the security of the world.

SHOE PROBLEMS

AMERICA'S leather problem has become a headache. This is shown by the recent announcement that the new shoe stamp, expected early in the Summer, will not be made good until August. There are apparently two major factors in this postponement.

One is the enormous, almost incredible number of heavy shoes needed by the armed forces. The rock and rubble of European streets and mountainsides, the coral, volcanic ash and shoe-destroying mold of Pacific islands, wreak terrible havoc upon the vital footwear of our men. The result is that each man needs more pairs of shoes per year than was previously believed possible.

Another is the decrease in the leather supply due to black market operations. In government inspected slaughter-houses every part of the animal is used. But illegal slaughterers, interested only in high meat prices, are inclined to destroy all other traces of their business. The desperately needed hides and the hoofs from which gelatin could be made disappear unused. For only hides bearing a clear life-history may be used in making shoes.

STEALING GAS

ONE of the meanest things any American can do, in these times, is to sneak into a neighbor's garage or back yard and drain off the gas in the tank for his own use. Such things have been known to occur lately. It should be understood that, in moral obliquity, they correspond to the stealing of a horse in old pioneer days. There was a period when such a theft meant death to the culprit.

Nobody now wants to shoot a neighbor or a nocturnal visitor, but it would be a fine thing to catch a few culprits on the job and give them what they deserve. They might be exposed on the public square. Or in lieu of that, they could be allowed to get off with a good paddling at the hands of the victims, while interested neighbors took snap shots.

"Give me liberty to know," said Milton, "to think, to believe and to utter freely, according to conscience, above all other liberties." To make this possible is the purpose of the charter about to be framed at San Francisco.

"It is better to light a candle," says the Service Committee of the American Friends, "than to curse the darkness." That is what the San Francisco conference is trying to do.

The best form of rest is said to be a complete change of occupation. On that principle our front-line heroes on their return may go in heavily for chess.

The future of Europe largely depends on this one question: Whom do the Germans blame for their present plight, the United Nations, the Nazis or themselves?

Inside WASHINGTON

scribe Hopes Conference
Doesn't "Go Hollywood"

Washington Looks Like
Just a Deserted Village

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—It would be tragic if the San Francisco conference were to take on the Hollywood manner. I hope the delegates to what is hoped to be the most important gathering of modern times will not be infected by the moving picture virus and behave like characters in a D. W. Griffith extravaganza. San Francisco may be too close to Hollywood for the good of the post-war world.

So far none of the news that has come out of San Francisco has had a tinge of reality. Imagine—800 delegates plus wives and secretaries, hundreds of writers and scores of lobbyists of one sort or another. Add the Russian "vodka and caviar" ship bouncing beside the Golden Gate. Imagine, too, the "side trips" arranged for the delegates. One—that special train that bore a carefully chosen group to Hollywood for the weekend and back again in time for the conference session on Monday!

Think of the 800 delegates, most of whom do not speak each other's language, trying to understand each other's point of view. Or to deliberately not understand.

What conference table could hold magic with which to bring peace to the world out of such a conglomeration of race, color, suspicion and ambition?

How can any country whose towns have been shot to pieces by invading foe or rescuing friend be expected to meet the rehabilitation plans of the peacemakers with a cheerful cooperation? And a "Certainly! Certainly! We'll agree to your proposition. Don't worry about our devastation and our murdered families. We have forgotten. We have forgotten all our own problems. We think only of the world as a whole."

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

SAN FRANCISCO, May 4—One of those invisible electrical storms swept up through the press against the American delegation and the whole world conference following the decision to admit Argentina. You might call it a static tempest or a terrific rise of hot air tension, which was strangely enough largely confined to a segment of the press and radio corps. Through the lobbies and streets you could hear the complaints of those who acted and talked as if it was fascist for the conference to "railroad" through such a decision. Messrs. Stettinius, Vandenberg, Connally, and Rockefeller were subjected to hot questioning at a press conference as if they themselves were fascist. It even reached expression on the radio, although the press I read (the papers available here) was equally excited.

The surge amazed even the American delegation, and its members gave every indication of confusion, as to its rise and how to handle it, for a time at least.

Frankly the uprising seemed a little synthetic to me. Molotov on the floor made what was a reasonable presentation of his standpoint, but I noticed he closed his speech with the statement that his protest was the only one which would be made by the Russian delegation. In short he showed no signs of being particularly outraged. But on the air later I heard less reasoned objections, by commentators actually contending the decision was "the cheapest city politics," "a serious mistake" and "a step toward fascism." I judge they must have been caught in the invisible storm. Their arguments were certainly wet enough to have been out in it all night.

The inside reasons for the decision were not given. The Stettinius speech from the floor was a brief justification to the effect that the decision had been reached by the steering committee (meaning the whole conference, in effect, as the chairman of every nation's delegation is on that committee), that the Latin American nations recommended it, and that the American delegation was for it (unanimously it later developed). Practically the whole world was for it because Molotov got only 7 votes on his proposition to delay the decision a few days and 4 votes against when taken, (although Britain and China abstained.)

The tricks of the business were naturally not mentioned, but it is quite plain to me what happened, namely:

Molotov wanted to delay this decision in order to bring his storm up in advance of the voting. If he could have let the reaction that subsequently developed sweep the city and the delegations for a few days he might have created sufficient pressure to change the decision—which incidentally is the only one he had lost at the conference up to that time.

Actually he had nothing to cry seriously about because in the same decision to admit Argentina, he also gained votes for White Russia and the Ukraine (on very flimsy grounds of justification)—yet strangely enough what he won in the deal was never mentioned by the complainants. That part of the matter was barely mentioned on the floor and not at all in the press conference. In short what he lost was played to high heaven to make the decision appear more one-sided than it actually was.

Now the honest truth of the matter is that this promise to Argentina was made by us officially weeks back to get her in. (Continued on Page Six)

An Important Development In Toxic Goitre Treatment

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

SOME time ago we wrote in these columns of the advantages of a new treatment for toxic goitre using a drug known as thiouracil. Readers will remember we stated at that time that in toxic goitre there is an excessive secretion of thyroid extract by the thyroid gland, which is located in the front part of the neck. This extra secretion produces such symptoms as loss of weight and strength, rapid heart beat, increased sweating, diarrhea, tremor and in some instances (when the condition has been present for some time) protrusion of the eyes, known as exophthalmos.

Just what causes toxic goitre has not as yet been determined. The condition is a serious one and if allowed to persist, may result in permanent damage to the heart, nervous system and other parts of the body.

Until recent times, surgical removal of most of the thyroid gland was accepted as the best treatment for toxic goitre. In certain instances, X-ray and radium have been employed, and in milder cases the giving of iodine, together with complete rest and the use of various sedative or nerve-quieting drugs was somewhat successful.

Some patients treated with iodine and rest do seem to improve to such an extent that operation is not required. In other words, the disease seems to just get better. On the other hand, many patients treated in this way for too long a time suffer such extensive damage to the tissues that they succumb to infections or become mental or physical wrecks.

The thiouracil treatment now seems to be well established. It is not known exactly how the drug works. However, it would appear probable that it prevents the union of a substance known as tyrosine and amino acid which comes from protein foods, and iodine, which is necessary in the formation of thyroxine. Previously we have told our readers that thyroxine is the active substance in the secretion formed by the thyroid gland under normal conditions.

Doctor Adolph M. Nussey of Birmingham, England, reports the results in the treatment of twenty-seven patients with toxic goitre, using thiouracil. The treatment was carried out for periods varying from three weeks to twelve months. Good results were obtained in all instances but one, and in this patient the disease had been present for years before treatment with the thiouracil was started.

Doctor Nussey thinks that all patients suffering from toxic goitre should be treated with thiouracil. It is administered three times a day for the first three to five weeks, after which time the dose is gradually reduced, and is kept at the lowest possible level to maintain the patient's well-being.

If the patient does not respond quickly to the treatment, the dose of thiouracil should not be increased beyond a safe limit. The patient must be kept under the constant supervision of the physician so that any reactions which develop may be noted promptly, and the dose of the preparation reduced.

It is Doctor Nussey's opinion that treatment with thiouracil is much safer than operation and that perhaps treatment with this drug may completely supplant operation as the method of choice in the treatment of many cases of toxic goitre.

Tomorrow: Dr. Bundesen will discuss "Hay Fever."

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Mrs. Gentry sipped her lobster bisque. "Tell me, my dear," she asked pointedly, "how do you manage?"

Gail's clear blue eyes were guileless. "Manage what?"

"The soft shoulders shruggled. "Being a woman. Isn't it a great detriment to your work?"

"To some extent," Gail agreed. "But it's not important."

"You mean it is not important to carry on one's womanly duties successfully?" Mrs. Gentry glanced at her son. "One's home, one's servants—"

"Those aren't mountains," Gail said impatiently. "In my own case, I find that with the help of a housekeeper, my small house runs efficiently. Katie knows my likes and dislikes, shops at the market, does the laundry and all that sort of thing. It would be foolish for me to waste the time."

"You mention minor duties," Mrs. Gentry said delicately. "There are others, you know."

Though she loathed such genteel implications, Gail answered civilly enough. "If you mean marriage and children, I'm sure both can be managed."

Mrs. Gentry took her second helping of fried chicken and yams. "Girls are so strange today," she sighed. "When Mr. Gentry and I were married, he wouldn't allow me to do a thing. He thought active women were a little unbalanced."

"His opinions would be pretty dated now," Gail retorted. "Women are becoming real helpmates to their men as they were in pioneer days, when they were true partners, sharing work, responsibility—everything! The following generations found women growing useless again, until—"

"Aren't you being rather intolerant, Gail?" Burke said.

"I don't think so," she answered. "It's true," he said hurriedly, "that girls now are as modern as bombers—"

Mrs. Gentry turned to him. "And do you really believe such modernity leads to happiness?" she inquired, with caustic gentleness.

"I do," Gail answered firmly. "I believe a marriage should be a kind of partnership. Most girls today have jobs and are reasonably independent. Consequently, they probably marry more for love than their mothers did."

"What an odd notion!" Mrs. Gentry said.

Dessert arrived, a Lady Baltimore cake and ice cream.

more cake and ice cream. Gail thought she'd never eaten a more starchy meal. She felt weighted down with lead, and it wasn't due to the food alone.

At nine o'clock, Burke turned on the radio for news. "My dear," Mrs. Gentry ordered mildly, "do turn it off. I can't bear hearing about the war. I suffer for our poor boys."

That terrible Russia—mark my words—will make a separate peace with Hitler!"

Gail took a deep breath. You had to love a man an awful lot to tolerate such a mother.

By nine-thirty, the conversation had petered out. Gail figured. She kept her eye on Burke, who was obviously uncomfortable. Poor fellow, he was between the frying pan and the fire.

Finally she said, "I must telephone my house."

Burke jumped up. "The phone's in the hall," he said, leading the way.

Katie announced there had been just one call. It came in a few minutes ago. Somebody called for a Miz Berend in Springdale, who was in labor. The pains were coming every five minutes.

"Why didn't you call me?" Gail demanded irritably.

"You didn't tell me where to reach you," Katie answered tartly. "If she calls again, say I'm on my way." Gail hung up and started back toward the drawing room. But the sound of Mrs. Gentry's high-pitched hysterical voice stopped her, suddenly, like a thunderbolt.

"Burke! You are out of your mind—that girl is no fit wife for you!"

"Mother, please—" Burke begged.

"You owe me something," Mrs. Gentry continued violently. "I have been a devoted mother. You cannot humiliate me by marrying that girl."

Gail returned to the telephone and made a screeching clatter. Then she went to the door. "I must run along," she said quickly. "I hope you'll forgive me, but one of my patients is having her baby."

"I'll come with you," Burke offered.

She shook her head. "Please don't bother. I'll get a cab." She smiled into the older woman's baleful eyes. "Thank you for the dinner. I shan't forget it."

"Thank you for coming," Mrs. Gentry said sweetly.

Burke saw Gail to a taxi. "Good-bye, darling," he said uncomfortably. "I'll call you soon."

Was this the surprise Burke had in store for her?

The car stopped before her house, and she dashed out. She opened the door and collected her bag and instruments. She had been worried about Mary Berend; she prayed for a normal birth. The girl was so frail.

Without changing her clothes, she ran out to the garage for her car, and drove swiftly through the darkened streets to the Springdale waterfront.

At a wooden tenement, she stopped the car. She hurried up the walk, then picked her way through a darkly lit hall to the top of the narrow basement stairs. From the stairwell came a strident roar. She stumbled and caught herself.

"You better be careful on them steps—" a voice cautioned. Looking down, she saw a heavyset, middle-aged woman watching her. "She feels awful bad, doctor—" the woman added. "I was gonna telephone you again."

"Has she been alone?" Gail asked.

"Well, I stayed with her a while, but I'm takin' care of my little grandchild—he's got a cold—"

"I'll take a look at him afterwards," Gail promised. "Will you come back presently? I may need you." She plunged into the basement room Mary Berend called home. It was more fit for storage place than living quarters, for the walls were damp, even in the summer, and the air sickly and humid.

The girl who was huddled in the sagging bed looked like a child. She is shaped like a child, too, Gail thought bitterly; malnutrition does terrible things to plump bones.

She went over to the bed. The girl's eyes were closed, tears crawling slowly down her pale cheeks. Gail felt the cords of her throat tightening. The poor kid...

"You're away ahead of schedule," Gail said cheerily. "Your Mister Nemo isn't due for another three or four weeks!"

The girl's eyes opened wearily. "I fell... on a bus, today," she whispered.

"Mrs. Berend, I'd like to shake you," Gail scolded. "Why didn't you call me?"

The girl was silent. Gail knew why she hadn't called. She hated to bother the doctor, for she had no money to pay her. And none of Gail's chidings had convinced her that it was right to come in for regular visits.

INFERRING PROBABLES

"PROBABLES" are just as important in expert card reading as certainties. On many an occasion it is possible to figure out a number of facts exactly, and the rest must be estimated on the basis of what seems most likely. Odds regarding probabilities in the distribution of a suit can get charged considerably by information furnished on other suits. The skilled player will weigh such factors and revise ordinary tables of likely distribution in the light of the special information he has gained.

He stated that home training and discipline are the foundations of society and are to be placed above school and church training. He said that present day problems are not new, but more serious because the philosophy of the times has changed. The burden of solving these problems he placed squarely on parents through home training.

Operetta Planned

The operetta, "Ask the Professor," by Clark and Lee will be presented May 9 and 10 by members of Circleville high school, assisted by choruses of boys and girls from grades 7 through 12. Miss Beatrice Sprague, teacher of music of Circleville schools, is coaching the production.

The cast of characters includes Mary K. Morgan as Emily Lee; Barbara Green as Maryida O'Neal; Charles Will as Professor Will Breakaway; Jack Miller, John Ainsworth; Eleanor Beck, June Ainsworth; Anne Moeller, Polly; Bob Sproule, Red O'Neal; Bob Wilkinson, Tommy; Miriam Turner, Mrs. O'Neal. Three special dances and a barn dance will be included in the entertainment, one dance being presented by 7th grade girls.

The story takes place on the campus of a fashionable Girls School on Commencement Day. The usual crowd of relatives and friends is present to witness the crowning of the Queen and to join in the festivities that follow.

John Ainsworth, who comes to see his sister, June, graduate, meets Maryida, the sister of his room-mate at college, and is much attracted to both her and her friend, Emily Lee, who is a student and an assistant teacher in the school.

Because Maryida's mother does laundry work for the girls in the school to help Red, her son, through college and to keep Maryida in night school, she does not want it known that Red belongs to Maryida and her, fearing that it will hurt Red's standing in college. Red, who is helping all he can, thinks she is foolish and rebels, but to no purpose.

John has a discussion on heredity with Professor Breakaway of the Girls School and to prove that heredity is all "bunk" as he has always believed, decides to send Maryida to the Girls' School and give her the same chance that girls from wealthy families enjoy. Maryida promises her brother, Red, that she will not accept the offer of charity from John. However, when she learns that John's old aunt is the one who makes the offer and that the professor thinks she is an ignoramus, in a fit of pique she forgets her promise to her brother and gracefully accepts John's offer before the whole school.

Act Two takes place on the same campus on Commencement Day one year later. Maryida surprises everyone with her splendid work during the year. She has been crowned Queen and everybody is waiting for the finishing event of the day, the Commencement Ball, when it is learned that John's aunt is not coming and, according to an old rule of the school, Maryida cannot attend the ball as she has no chaperon.

Then events follow one another rapidly. Maryida learns that, instead of an aunt, June and John have paid her way through school. Miss Stone, the president, angered by their subterfuge, will not allow June to chaperon Maryida, and recalls John and June's invitation to the ball. Maryida indignantly leaves for home.

In the meantime, Red and his mother arrive. They were summoned by Tommy the comedian of the play. Tommy is sent post-haste after Maryida on his motorcycle and she is brought back.

The Professor is quite overcome by the beauty and poise of Maryida's good breeding and fine mind is at last made plain and in spite of John's seeming proof to the contrary, he still believes in her.

Red, who has found a fine job and won a wonderful prize for an invention, pays Maryida's debts in full. The president forgives John and June and so the wash lady's son and daughter make good and all ends happily.

Ladies' Society. Trinity Lutheran Ladies' society will meet Wednesday in the parish house for a cooperative supper at 6 p. m. in observance of Mother's Day.

DONATE $543 TO PARALYSIS FUND

Pickaway county's share of the contributions in the annual "March Of Dimes" drive from collections in moving picture houses was $271, according to an announcement from P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. The receipt of the money was acknowledged by Mrs. Anna Chandler, Thursday.

The total amount of the collection in Pickaway county motion picture houses was $343.66. Half of this amount goes to the National Infantile Paralysis Foundation. Collections in theatres throughout the nation will probably total more than the four and one-half million dollars that was donated last year, according to the report of Nicholas M. Schenck, national chairman.

From independent donations throughout the county such as school collections and organizational donations $208 was collected by the county. This makes a total of $479 that may be used to combat infantile paralysis within the county.

INDUCTION OF 4-F ATHLETES IS INVESTIGATED

WASHINGTON, May 4—The war department is investigating charges by Rep. Melvin Price, D., Ill., that professional athletes classified 4-F have been inducted into the armed services regardless of physical disabilities.

Price, who protested to the war department that some athletes were taken into the army without even a change in their 4-F classification, said he expected a revision of the draft regulations within a few days.

He disclosed that Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson had informed him an investigation was being made by the inspector general "into the manner in which the war department directives in regard to the induction of professional athletes are being administered."

One of the directives provides for war department review of cases in which an athlete is deferred by his local board for physical reasons.

Price said he sought no special privileges for athletes, only a "fair deal." He charged the army was discriminating against athletes when it inducted men who did not meet the minimum physical requirements.

to our Latin American setup. The decision was in accord with the agreements we made at Chapultepec to the Latin countries who wanted to bring Argentina in there. The matter was so cut and dried the Argentine delegation was down at Los Angeles, having made the long trip from home, to await the decision they knew must come if we were to keep our word.

Naturally Molotov did not like this. The best argument he could make against it was to complain about the nature of the Argentine government in the past. That subject has been widely discussed, and frankly I have never read any analyses of it which were favorable to its Fascist nature. But part of the agreement we made at Chapultepec was that Argentina would change, even create a free press. The fact that we exacted these promises is proof enough that there is no Fascist implication in the decision at all—rather the contrary.

The plain and simple facts show the American delegation and the conference was fully justified from any standpoint you could possibly name.

Indeed, I think most Americans would be pleased if Russia would make for herself the promises Argentina has made, particularly as to a free press, free expression for her people. And if he is going into the complexity of this one government, there are puzzling complexities also in other governments—to wit the handpicked Russian government of Lublin Poles.

Then why all the hot air?

BRAVES HAILED AS NEW MIRACLE TEAM OF MAJORS

NEW YORK, May 4 — Around the hotel lobbies where most of the baseball is being "played" these rainy afternoons, they were tabling the Boston Braves today as the St. Louis Browns of 1945 and Manager Bob Coleman as the new "miracle man" of the majors.

The modest Hoosier-born boss of the Braves disclaims both appellations and says only time will tell whether his spirited collection of kids and oldsters can maintain their present sparkling pace in the National League race.

Maybe it's wishful thinking up Boston way, but there is a high degree of hope that Coleman will bring the fans their first National League pennant since the original miracle man, George Stallings, did it with his motley lot in 1914. For years, the fans gave up on the Braves and pinned their faith in the free-spending Tom Yawkey, owner of the Red Sox, who tried to land an American League pennant by writing certified checks.

Now they have a hope that Coleman, working wonders with a team that seemed destined for a one-way trip to nowhere, may do what Yawkey couldn't do with more than a million dollars.

And if turn-about is fair play, the Boston fans have got a pennant coming before any other club in either league. All of the other seven clubs in the National League have won pennants since the Braves did in 1914 and all of the other seven in the American have done it since the Red Sox won in 1918.

'TYPICAL GI' IS BROTHER OF CITY RESIDENT

Mrs. William Clark, 1226 South Pickaway street, received a pleasant surprise recently when she picked up a copy of a Columbus paper and saw the picture of her brother, Sgt. Willis Cochran, Columbus.

The picture, taken in Rothenburg, Germany, was captioned "Typical American Infantryman." It was stated that he carried two combat knives, two (or more) pistols and other assorted implements of war.

Mrs. Clark has not heard from her brother for several weeks. He was wounded at St. Lo and received the purple heart. He wears the combat medal. He is a member of the fourth infantry division of Gen. Patton's Third Army.

Another brother, Pfc. John W. Cochran, is serving in the same area, but they have not met. They are sons of Mrs. Cecil Cochran, 453 South Powell avenue, Columbus.

BOYS ARE HOPE OF TOMORROW ROTARIANS TOLD

Floyd J. Hemmer, past district governor of Rotary International, spoke at the luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club in the Pickaway Arms restaurant Thursday.

Mr. Hemmer is the superintendent of the Indiana state farm, a penal institution. He spoke on the problems that are arising from this generation, from the boys who are in service and those that have been neglected by working parents in their adolescence.

He said that there is no doubt that a home, as an institution, to do good, is much better than any that are created by the state. Most inmates of state institutions, he said, come from communities where there is a deficiency of schools and churches and a lack of leadership in the community.

A boy's future is reflected by his home environment, home training and parental attitudes. "The boy of today," he stated, "is the hope of tomorrow."

CITY, COUNTY OFFICERS TO ATTEND FBI SCHOOL

Police Chief W. F. McCrady and Sheriff Charles H. Radcliff announced Friday that they would attend the FBI law enforcement conference to be held May 22 in Columbus. They were invited to the conference by F. C. Holloman, special agent in charge of the Cincinnati division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The FBI agent extended the invitation when he was in Circleville Thursday.

The purpose of the conference is to synchronize the activities of officers in the enforcement of laws. The program in Columbus will have discussions by outstanding police officers, a practical investigation, demonstration, of a murder scene, and other items of interest to law enforcement officers.

When Napoleon took Berlin in 1806, civilians cheered and the Prussian Army accepted unconditional surrender.

CHANDLER WILL RULE BASEBALL WITH FIRM HAND

Easy-Going Kentuckian Says He Will Use Authority For Good Of Game

CHICAGO, May 4 — "Happy" Chandler, the jovial senator from Kentucky, plans to rule baseball with the same stern resolve by which the late Judge Kenesaw M. Landis chartered the course of America's favorite pastime for 23 years.

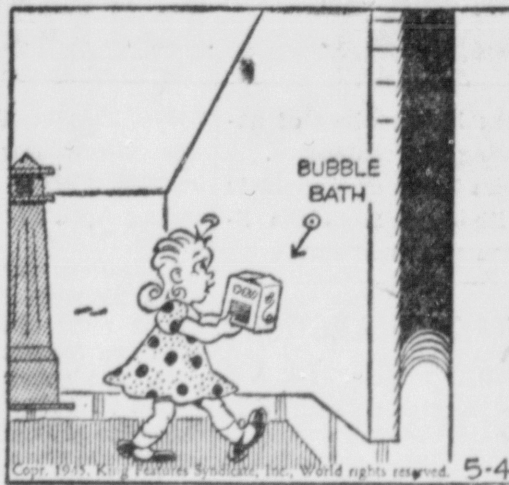

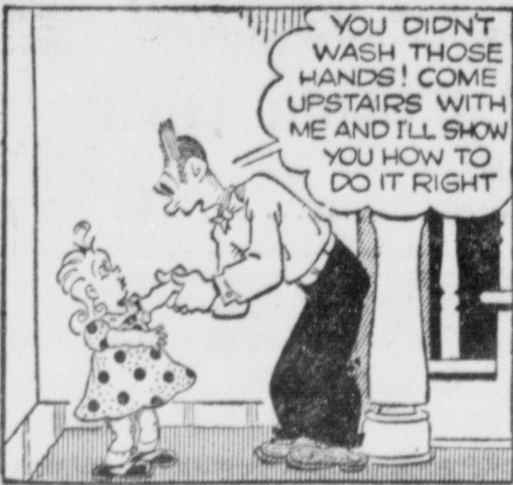

Chandler, who was appointed to succeed Landis as baseball commissioner 10 days ago, let it be known today that an easy-going Kentuckian can be as hard-driving and fierce when championing the cause of righteousness as was the grim-visaged federal judge from Ohio.

"I have absolute authority over the game," Chandler said during an interview. "And I plan to use it for the good of America, baseball and the people."

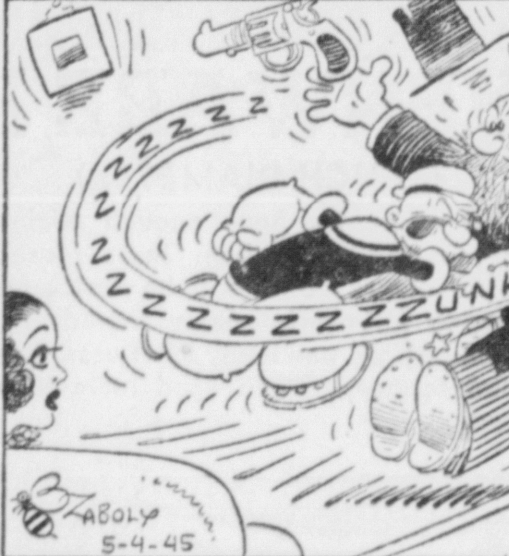

Numerous critics have contended that in choosing Chandler baseball selected a good

TREATIES, PLANS FOR SECURITY ARE DISPLAYED

Pamphlets And Books Answer Questions Asked About World Conference

With the eyes of all the world anxiously watching the outcome of the San Francisco Conference, with so many radios tuned in on its speeches, many questions and comments have been brought in to the Circleville Library. The Library has on display, for these tense weeks the treaties already made and the peace proposals. One of the main features of the display at the circulation desk is that of the Chart of The United Nations Organization for Peace and World Progress. It includes the three divisions: The International Court of Justice, the General Assembly and the Security Council. The entire organization has for its functions and duties the following: encourages nations to co-operate, promotes prosperity, advances social progress, fosters freedoms, coordinates international agencies, admits new members to United Nations, investigates disputes among nations, seeks peaceful settlements, decides on measures to keep peace, takes political or economic action and if that fails, takes military action.

Some of the books concerning peace plans are: "Coming Struggle for Peace", by Andre Vinson, Bernard Pares "Russia and the Peace", James T. Shotwell's "Great Decision", Sumner Welles "Time for Decision", Carl Becker's "How New will the Better World Be" George Fielding Eliot's "Hour of Triumph", "From Victory to Peace", by Hutchinson, "Problems of Lasting Peace", by Herbert Hoover and Hugh Gibson.

For a better understanding of our allies, there are such books to be recommended as "People on Our Side", by Edgar Snow, "China to Me", by Emily Hahn, "Peoples of the USSR", by Louise Strong, all of these written by Americans who have spent many years of research and study while living in their respective countries.

There are four pamphlets, brief and to the point, on the four questions confronting our nation today: "War: How we can prevent it," "Social Progress: How can we work for it," "Prosperity: How can we promote it," "Freedom: how we can achieve it."

Headline books include such titles as "Peace that Pays", by Brockway, an address by Dean

Acheson, assistant secretary of state, on the place of "Bretton Woods Conference in Economic Collective Security", Brooks Emery Mainsprings of World Politics and "United Today for Tomorrow." More specifically we have "What to do With Germany," by Nizer; Moulton's "What to do With Germany and Japan", and "What to do with Italy", by Salamini. On the table too, are the colorful flags in miniature of nations attending the conference.

All of these books or pamphlets may be withdrawn from the library for home use and study.
